ABOUT THIS GUIDE

The heroin and drug epidemic in our county has had a devastating impact on individuals and families. Most of us don't know where to turn when faced with the problem of drug abuse or addiction.

This resource guide is designed to let you know help is available. From advice in talking with your loved one, to help in finding treatment facilities, this guide will help walk you through the process.

You are not alone. Many people are faced with drug or alcohol addiction.

Can addiction be treated successfully? YES. Addiction is a treatable disease. Discoveries in the science of addiction have led to advances in drug abuse treatment that help people stop abusing drugs and resume their productive lives. (1)

Opiate Overdose Prevention – (heroin and pain killers are opiates.)

Free Narcan Kits available at Clermont Recovery Center please call 513-735-8100.

Risk Factors

Overdoses can happen to anyone. Individuals at a higher risk may have:

- A substance abuse history
- A mental health history
- A painful physical illness or compromised respiratory system
- Combined one drug with other drugs and/or alcohol
- Used drugs while alone
- Used after a period of not using or reduced usage, or
- A new dealer or new supply

Signs of an Opiate Overdose

- Struggling to breathe or snoring in an unusual way
- Not reacting to attempts to awaken
- Hands, face, and/or lips turning purple or blue
- Not responding to pain
- Complaining about being too hot
- Vomiting, or
- Acting unreasonable or appearing confused

What to DO

- Do call 911 immediately for medical intervention
- Do use Narcan if available
- Do try to awaken the person by rubbing knuckles hard against the chest bone
- Do clear the airway, pinch the nose closed, and blow air into the mouth
- Do position the person on their side if vomiting
- Do keep the person warm and stay until help arrives
- Do share information about what drugs were used, and
- Do leave everything in the room in place

What NOT to do

- Don't allow the person to "sleep it off"
- Don't put the person in a bath, shower, or ice
- Don't give the person any substance (except Narcan)
- Don't leave the person alone or unattended, and
- Don't treat the person with home remedies – they do not work and postpone life-saving medical treatment.

Choose to SAVE the LIFE of the person above all else!

What is Enabling?

DEFINITION: Enabling refers to the process by which family members, such as partners, parents, and children, "enable" an addicted person to continue their addiction, by failing to set appropriate boundaries, failing to recognize the problem, providing money etc. In short, it's doing the things for addicts that they can do for themselves and by preventing them from suffering the consequences of their actions.

Helping is doing something for someone that they are not capable of doing themselves.

Enabling is doing for someone things that they could, and should, be doing themselves. It is so important for the loved ones of an addict to get educated in the disease of addiction and to learn to set boundaries. Family members should also get in a good support group for their own well-being and their own recovery, as the disease of addiction affects the whole family.

What we do and don't do as a family can determine whether our loved one gets the help they need or continues in their addiction.

Some examples of enabling:

- Calling in sick for the addict/alcoholic because they were too sick because of their drug/alcohol use to get up and go to work.
- Giving them money to support their drug/alcohol habit.
- Making excuses for their behavior.
- Pay for their attorney and court fees.

It has been said that the reason we enable is that it makes us “feel better”; it's not what's best for the addict. Many times when addicts/alcoholics enabling system is removed, the fear will force them to seek help, but there are no guarantees.

Twelve Ways to Help a Loved One with Addiction

by Linda L. Verst, BA CPS

I've heard it said that "what is urgent is rarely important, and what is important is rarely urgent". That may be true about most things, but it surely did not feel true to me when my husband was in the midst of a destructive addiction to alcohol and other drugs, or later, when our son developed a terrifying love affair with cocaine. Everything felt urgent. Everything seemed life or death. I lost all perspective on decision making. Everything felt equally important, frightening beyond my coping skills.

We are, according to the media, in the midst of a heroin epidemic, which is defined as an outbreak of a disease that spreads more quickly and more extensively among a group of people than would normally be expected. Many parents, siblings, wives and other loved ones have the urgency I describe.

You may be one of these folks, terrified your beloved son(s) or daughter(s) will die if you make the wrong move. Please understand: You can do all the right things, and he/she may still lose his/her life. But you can move the odds in favor of survival by what you choose to do/not do. I've studied addiction and preventing addiction close to 50 years, but probably more important to you, I've lived through it. I want to share some possible strategies/ideas that help, in the hope they will be of service. This is not an all-inclusive list and I am not an expert; my ideas are not necessarily listed in order of importance. They come with my fervent prayer for your own recovery, as well as that of your loved one.

1. Take steps immediately toward your own recovery.

You've probably been missing sleep, meals and recreation. Find a way to take better care of yourself. When there is addiction in a family it throws everything and everyone out of balance. Cancer affects family members; so does addiction; this is what the experts mean when they call it a family disease. There are no “normal” coping skills for an abnormal disease. Restore your own balance. As an Al-Anon Public Relation ad once said: You can see what it’s doing to him/her. Can you see what it’s doing to you?

2. To that end, find a good 12 Step group. Nar-Anon is for family members and friends of addicts. Al-Anon is for family members and friends of alcoholics. If it’s an addiction other than alcohol, and you can’t find a Nar-Anon group close by, go to Al-Anon. It’s been around longer, and as a result there are more established groups to choose from. The only requirement for Al-Anon membership is that you have a friend or relative with an alcohol problem. Who doesn’t?! Just remember everything said about coping with alcoholism applies to other addictions as well. Listen and learn. Remember: Nar-Anon and Al-Anon are self-help groups and not made up of perfect people. Go to at least 6 meetings before you decide it’s not for you. Find the one where you feel safest and get a phone list of members. Find groups on line or in the phone book.
3. Before and after meetings, talk to 12 step friends; they will have ideas of places to go for further help. I once had an Al-Anon friend who could quote the price of a broken telephone pole – with or without transformer. These people can help restore your sense of humor.
4. Do not take on any responsibility that is not yours. Repeat this to yourself as many times as it takes. He’s in jail? Not your responsibility. He owes someone money? Not your responsibility. She’s hungry? Tired? Unemployed? Not your responsibility. Repeat the following, too: The longer I do for someone anything that they should be doing themselves, the longer I am aiding and abetting the disease of addiction. Got that? You are helping him/her stay sick and get sicker, and avoid recovery and sobriety. When you stop this stuff, you are not being cruel, you are loving him/her. Repeat that, too. You know why? Because your addict will not be happy. Call your 12 Step friends; they will support you.

5. Find out where good inpatient and outpatient treatment facilities, therapists and the like are in your community and state/surrounding states. Check out more than one or two before you settle in for where you'll go for help and support. Check on cost, who pays; what the loved one's insurance may cover. Trust your gut – you will know who you can work with. Some healers are not quite as well as they need to be to help you. My husband and I went through 9 psychiatrists before we found one who treated us like part of the solution in treating a mental illness that escalated after sobriety.
6. Be honest with yourself and the person you love, whose addiction is causing you strife. Sometimes, as when he/she is presenting convincing schemes, all of which lead down the road to your pocketbook, the best thing you can say is: "I love you but I cannot help you. I do not have money for you." Repeat once or twice if you must. Then leave the room, hang up the phone, don't return the text. Trust me, he/she heard you the first time.
7. Addiction can cause a lack of conscience driven behavior. If your loved one with an addiction has keys to your home or even if he/she doesn't, lock up anything you do not want stolen. Especially, lock up guns, knives, electronic devices that can be easily removed, family heirlooms and medications. Your loved one may not steal your belongings, but if he/she's using, he/she has friends who will. If something is stolen from your home, report it to the police immediately. If you suspect where the items are, or who took them, tell the truth. This is no time for

- protecting someone from facing consequences. Arrest and jail can be a safe place for an addict. If it was cancer, you would take him/her to a hospital. Think of it that way.
8. Be assured of the following: You did not cause this illness; you cannot cure this illness; you cannot control this illness. You can cope with it. Put your energy there.
 9. Again, addiction, whether in your child, spouse or other loved one, is not your fault. We make amends when necessary, but each person is responsible for his/her own behavior. I believe that no parent ever held an infant in his/her arms and whispered into the baby's ear "I can't wait to see how much I can screw up your life." An Al-Anon writer's remarks in response to a grown child, ranting about her upbringing went something like this: "Yes, dear, some of your problems have my name on them, but ALL the solutions have your name on them.
 10. Sometimes I think the American way is to throw money at problems. Please understand that this problem in your life is going to require time and energy, love, compassion, patience. Your loved one may not be ready for help or guidance, but you can get it. It will help you. It's worth every penny and every hour; Al-Anon and Nar-Anon are free!
 11. Want to take action? An intervention is best done with professional help. The Alcoholism Council of Greater Cincinnati is a great place to start, no matter where you are in the process. Call 513 281 7880 or go to www.alcoholismcouncil.org
Casey's Law now exists in OH and KY. "The act provides a means of intervening with someone who is unable to recognize his or her need for treatment due to impairment. This law will allow parents, relatives and/or friends to petition the court for treatment on behalf of the substance abuse-impaired person." This quote is from operationunite.org/treatment/caseys-law. Go there for more information.

12. Take time to slowly, mindfully study the above 11 suggestions. Begin to practice one or two. Breathe. Try not to let your urgency pull you immediately to #11. It's placed there for a reason. If you want the possibility of long lasting effects, it helps to prepare carefully. Are you a person of faith? Now's the time to put your beliefs to the test. This will likely be one of the most difficult, challenging issues you've ever had to turn over to God. The time to begin is now.

How do you prevent addiction in children?

There's much work that's been done on "What makes kids resilient?" I like it, and I try to practice it mindfully, since I first heard it. The version I'm sharing here came from Bonnie Benard and Emmy Werner in the 1980's on what makes children resilient. They looked at research on kids who grew up in war-torn countries, in poverty and as children of single parents. I like their take, as it is easy to recall and apply. It is simple and practical.

The best way I know to teach it is to ask the question: "Who made you strong?" Take a few minutes right here, and think about the person(s) in your own life who helped you to become who you are today.

When I do this, people mostly come up with behaviors and qualities in adults who helped them be resilient and skills they learned from these grown-ups.

Benard and Werner found four areas of resiliency skills that can be taught to children formally and informally, and 3 types of protective factors that adults use to make it happen. Here these are, as I recall them:

Resiliency skills

- ❖ A sense of purpose and future – I have goals and expectations and I know what kind of person I want to be.
- ❖ Problem solving skills – anything from simply knowing how to solve a math problem, to how can I get from a to b when it's not a direct route.
- ❖ Social skills – here, I think of my husband; he taught our kids to be polite to the cop who pulls you over – always use respect, honesty & communicate clearly.

- ❖ Autonomy – the ability to stick to my own plans when seemingly all others are going a different way.

Protective Factors foster resiliency:

- ❖ Caring and Support – kids need to know we really care what they do, what happens to them, and that they will be supported no matter what.
- ❖ High Expectations – We want to encourage them to do their very best and catch them with positive feedback when they do.
- ❖ Meaningful Participation – I do things that benefit others; it feels so good to contribute.

Pretty simple stuff, and yet if we are mindful and present in any child’s life, whether it be my child, a neighbor, a child on my sports team or church, any adult can contribute to a child’s resiliency.

Many people think of a parent or grandparent when first asked “Who made you strong?” I thought of a Roman Catholic nun, my homeroom teacher in high school. I brought a list of words to school that I had lifted off my mom’s medical report, since no one at home would tell me what was wrong. She explained that ALS was a neurological disease, and defined the phrase “poor prognosis of recovery”. She did this with great care and support; it meant so much to me, that I still see it as pivotal after 50 years!

Please note: There’s a lot of research on genetics & substance abuse that I don’t address here. Read about it, though. Your kids need to know their family history. It can help them make wise choices.

What specifics do we teach about alcohol, and other drugs?

Think about the inoculations you get for children when they are small. Most would not consider skipping those! Yet we are self-conscious about inoculating for sex, tobacco, alcohol & drugs which can derail our kids as early as late elementary or middle school! Understand this: It's our parental responsibility.

Be age appropriate, but begin to address the alcohol/other drug issue early. Protect them – keep medicines and alcohol out of their reach. Teach that you don't take other's medicines. Beware the "monkey see, monkey do" principle – they don't always hear what you say – say it anyway, but remember, they watch everything you do. Address your own addiction issues.

Start early, keep at it. You don't do the appropriate medicine talk once and think it's done. Potty training doesn't work that way. Hitting a baseball or riding a bike doesn't work that way. Answer questions honestly. If they don't come up, bring them up periodically.

Use teachable moments. Keep an eye out – they're everywhere. Ask your child what beer commercials are saying to you. Is it that their beer makes you sexy? Cool? Someone you know died of a heroin overdose? A middle or high schooler needs to know how you feel about this. They need to know that you care, and that you love and don't want to lose them.

Set clear standards and boundaries. Stick by them. Example "You are expected not to drink underage. Prescription drugs taken for fun are extremely dangerous. I expect you not to do this." Say it; stick to it.

Be honest, but use your own history judiciously, not glorifying. Research indicates that teens think “Wow, he lived through it, I will, too.” In addition, it is important to remember that many drugs are far stronger than previously. It’s not about you; it’s about your child.

Got a teen? Now’s not the time to let go of the reins. Be vigilant. Can’t stay awake? Sleep in her bed to be sure she came home on time. Let her know she can call if she finds herself in a pickle. My girls taught me this: always keep a bottle of water in your hand at parties. Don’t drink anything someone else opened.

Find times to just talk and listen, not lecture. I lay in bed next to them in the dark. Sometimes they’ll talk in the car, or on a blanket under the stars. Listen.

Did you know that most kids get alcohol or prescription drugs from their own home or a friend’s home? Did you know that when parents collect the keys and allow drinking, their kids are more likely to drink and drive or ride with a drunk driver than kids whose parents take a no use stand? Key fact: the longer you delay onset of first use of alcohol/tobacco/other drugs, the less likely one will develop life-long addiction.

Mom and Dad don’t agree? Read the research. Be as one on this. Join forces with like-minded parents at your church or school. These facts have been researched often, yet many adults ignore the facts. They may be angry when you set standards, check where they are and who they’re with, but nobody said raising kids is easy. We’re the adults – it’s our responsibility to stand up to the pressure. They don’t often act like it, but research has indicated time and again, that parents have more influence on their children than anyone else in their lives. Use it.

20 Questions to ask before selecting or entering an addiction treatment center

By Donna Dowdney

- 1.) What type of accreditation or licensing does your treatment program have?
- 2.) What credentials and licenses does the programs' clinical staff have?
- 3.) If residential - what is the length of stay? 30-60-90 days?
- 4.) Is medical detoxification (detox) offered as part of the residential treatment?
- 5.) Do you provide "Medication Assisted Treatment" (MAT) in the treatment of addiction? Do you use Suboxone, Naltrexone or Vivitrol in the treatment of "opiate addiction"?
- 6.) How much does your program cost?
Do you accept insurance?
Do you accept Medicaid?
Do you offer sliding scale fees? Are these fees based on family income or just personal income?
- 7.) What kind of services are included in your fees?
- 8.) Is your rehab an open program or a locked down program?
- 9.) Does your program assess for "dual diagnoses" and treat as necessary?
- 10.) What is the patient-to-counselor ratio? How much one-on-one time will there be?
- 11.) Does your program offer individualized treatment?
- 12.) Is treatment gender specific?
- 13.) Does your program address a full range of needs to help the individual, including medical, psychological, spiritual, social, and health wellness issues? If I choose, will there be faith based counselors available to me?

14.) What therapeutic model or theories form the foundation of your treatment program, such as 12 steps, faith-based, and cognitive behavioral or motivational enhancement?

15.) What activities will I be required to participate in while in your program - individual counseling, group counseling, or twelve-step programs?

16.) What type of help is available for families?

17.) Do you have an aftercare program? If so - how long? What does it entail?

18.) Do you provide a written discharge plan? If I do not live near facility - will you help me find resources for continuing care in my own community?

19.) What are your disciplinary rules if one slips and uses while in rehab or breaks one of your facility rules? Are you kicked out or are you warned and reprimanded? If asked to leave - do you refund any of the fees paid?

20.) What is your success rate? Have there been studies to measure the effectiveness of your program's treatment methods?

Final Thoughts!

These are a sampling of questions to guide you in the selection of a treatment center! You can reprioritize the order of the questions depending on the issues that are important to you.

You should first visit the treatment facility and see what the environment is like, if it is clean and hospitable - and get the feel if it would be a good fit for you.

As far as the accreditation issue - there are various national accreditations such as the “Joint Commission” and “National Committee for Quality”. The bare minimum requirement is that the center is state licensed and is highly rated.

The sooner you start researching a formal treatment program, the faster you’ll get the support needed to end your addiction.
